Look a little closer

Christianshavn offers canals, quays and residential streets that reveal Copenhagen's relationship with water. Begin around Christianshavns Torv and follow public routes along a manageable stretch. Compare working waterside details with the quieter edges of homes. Churches, towers, restaurants and other attractions are separate visits; do not assume that a waterside doorway or mooring is public.

Something to notice

Notice one bridge, one mooring and one doorway. How does each handle the edge between land and water?

A little consideration

Stay on permitted public paths, leave entrances clear and respect residents, workers and other visitors.
