Look a little closer

Dean Village sits beside the Water of Leith, where former milling surroundings now include homes and quiet public routes. Look at the relationship between water, bridges and steep-sided streets rather than entering residential courtyards. Riverside paths may close after weather or maintenance work. Choose a permitted route and keep voices low around doorways and windows.

Something to notice

Notice how a building meets the riverbank. What traces suggest the water once did more than provide a view?

A little consideration

Stay on permitted public paths, leave entrances clear and respect residents, workers and other visitors.
