Look a little closer

Olympic Sculpture Park places large-scale artworks within a landscape beside Elliott Bay. Paths connect sculpture, planting and changing views of the water. The setting rewards a wandering visit, with attention to both the artworks and the public space that brings them into everyday city life.

Something to notice

Walk around one sculpture without touching it. Notice how its shape changes against trees, sky and water.

A little consideration

Follow posted artwork rules, leave sculptures untouched and keep shared paths clear.
