Look a little closer

Seattle's waterfront brings public paths, piers and maritime activity alongside Elliott Bay. Walk at an unhurried pace and notice how the city meets the water. Public spaces and paid attractions sit close together; choose a stretch of the promenade that leaves room for a pause.

Something to notice

Watch a ferry leave or arrive. Notice the changing distance between the city streets, the piers and the horizon.

A little consideration

Keep paths and doorways clear. Respect residents, use marked crossings and ask before photographing people closely.
